ALL MEN ARE CREATED EQUAL. BUT WE CAN CHANGE THAT.

In 1955, on a cold and wet Seattle evening, William and Mary Gates rushed home with their first child. Much like many young parents today, they quickly realized school alone couldn't satisfy the ambitious appetite of their son's eager mind. He simply needed more.

Then Billy came to us. With the Scouts he learned how to sail, fish, set up camp and fend for himself. For starters. He organized his priorities and discovered the importance of teamwork and self-discipline. Perhaps most crucially, however, Billy learned how to take initiative and lead men.

Since 1910 the Boy Scouts of America have been continuing the education of America's youth, handing down life lessons that are centuries old. From simple navigation skills to advance survival techniques, Scouts learn life where it happens — outside. Often strong spirits find classrooms confining. Never let school interfere with your son's education. Give him the power to face the countless challenges of life head on, and the backbone to overcome them. Consider us a prep-school for a lifetime of leadership. Just take a look at our member roster if you're not convinced. Presidents, world-class athletes, astronauts, filmmakers, actors, prize-winning authors, and captains of industry fill our noble ranks. There's even a couple of rock stars in there, too. Doesn't your son deserve every advantage in life? Give him an unfair one. Call 1-800-USA-BOYS or visit scouting.org to find the troop nearest you. With the Scout's help, there's no telling what your boy can become.

IN THE RACE TO BE THE BEST THERE ARE NO DRAWS.

Only months after Black Tuesday signaled America's slide into The Great Depression, Stephen and Viola Armstrong welcomed into their home a quiet new addition to the family. Quiet, that is, until the age of six when his father surprised him with a life changing gift: his first flight.

Flying soon became an all consuming passion and Neil filled his room with model airplanes. Then Neil found us. With the help of other Scouts he built a wind tunnel in the basement of his parents' farmhouse to test his designs. Then, itching to begin flying lessons, he talked his troopmates into hanging around the local airport to do odd jobs for the pilots, earning enough to start his flight training. The rest, as they say, is world history.

From fresh air fundamentals to advance management moxie, for nearly one hundred years The Boy Scouts of America have equipped tomorrow's trail blazers with the ability to honor their dreams and the confidence to realize them. We give young men the determination it takes to become world-class athletes, successful filmmakers, captains of industry, Presidents, awardwinning authors, astronauts, and even rock stars. Doesn't your son deserve every advantage in life? Give him an unfair one. Call 1-800-USA-BOYS or visit scouting.org to find the troop nearest you. HISTORY ISN'T WRITTEN BY BIT PLAYERS.

As America caught her breath after the Japanese surrender in Tokyo Bay, Arnold and Leah Spielberg decided the greatest threat to freedom had been overcome and it was finally time to start their family. Before long their precocious and somewhat peculiar little boy began to have trouble in school. It seems he became bored rather quickly.

Then Stevie came to us. We told him to trust his passions, and to protect them with the strength of independence. With the Scouts Stevie developed his prodigious talent as a photographer, and informed his vision with a variety of means to feed it. Like his treeplanting service which financed his first feature length film, "Firelight," based on his experiences as a scout.

For almost a hundred years The Boy Scouts of America have trained tomorrow's leaders in everything from the basics of outdoor survival to the complexities of human nature. Frequently a young man becomes weary of routine because deep down he knows life is anything but. Reward your son's fascination with life and living, and give him the ability to preserve that enthusiasm. It's this drive that enables Scouts to become Presidents, astronauts, world-class athletes, prize-winning authors, captains of industry, actors, filmmakers and even rock stars. Your son deserves every advantage in life. Give him an unfair one. Call 1-800-USA-BOYS or visit scouting.org to find the troop nearest you. The unsolved mystery of the "ancient wires"

By MICHAEL GURLIACCIO
Metro Beat

Rumors have been circulating for some time about the possibility of primitive "technology" still hiding in the surrounding area, but unbeknownst to local residents, these pests were right under their noses.

"The mysterious wires were found behind several desktops in the area and are believed to be part of an ancient system of communication," said deputy Charles Hamblen. "Seems odd, I know, but people used to need these awkward things. I guess it just makes me feel sorry for anyone living in the past."

The "wires" were discovered on the backs of computers, rendering them immobile.

Local man not robbed

Area resident Todd Blankenship found himself an unexpected non-victim of theft in the early evening hours of April 26. "I called Clearwire to find out more about their wireless broadband service," says Blankenship, 28. Knowing how a lot of other broadband providers overcharge, Blankenship expected the worst. "When they told me that there was no installation, no bundled packages or services, and that I can go online anywhere in the service area - I was sure it would be really expensive."

As it turns out, Blankenship saved 60 percent on his first three months of Clearwire service.
